Motivation Letter

Ahmed Elsayed Mohamed Mayalou · Master's in International Business and Entrepreneurship, Year I · Romanian-American University

Application: Erasmus+ Blended Intensive Programme – Global Management Game, HU University of Applied Sciences Utrecht (18–22 January 2027)

Back-up option: Global Management Simulation – Marketing in Action (25–29 January 2027)

Dear Erasmus+ Selection Committee,

My name is Ahmed Elsayed Mohamed Mayalou, and I am a full-time Master's student in International Business and Entrepreneurship at the Romanian-American University. I am applying for the Blended Intensive Programme Global Management Game at HU University of Applied Sciences Utrecht, with Global Management Simulation – Marketing in Action as my back-up option.

My background is in engineering, which taught me to think analytically, work with data and solve problems step by step. I chose a Master's in International Business and Entrepreneurship to combine this way of thinking with business strategy. I already run my own digital business, so I know from experience how important it is to make decisions quickly, understand the numbers behind them and communicate a clear value proposition to customers.

I am especially passionate about gamification and game-based approaches to business. Through self-study and online courses, I have learned how game mechanics such as goals, competition, feedback and rewards can increase motivation, engagement and performance. Although the Global Management Game is not a course on gamification itself, it is built on a game-based learning format: teams manage a company through a business simulation, with rounds, measurable results and real competition. This makes it a unique chance to experience these mechanics from the inside, not only study them in theory, and to improve my sales pitch and presentation skills, which are essential for any entrepreneur.

My career goal is to work in an international company, and this is exactly why Erasmus+ matters to me. Working with students from different countries will strengthen my intercultural communication and teamwork skills. The programme is also an ideal preparation for my next step, as I have been selected for an Erasmus+ study mobility at Vistula University in Warsaw for the spring semester 2026/2027.

After the programme, I plan to apply what I learn to my own digital business and to my future work, and I would be glad to share my experience with other RAU students to encourage them to take part in Erasmus+ opportunities.

Thank you for considering my application.

Kind regards,

Ahmed Elsayed Mohamed Mayalou
Master's in International Business and Entrepreneurship, Year I
Romanian-American University